IOTA HOUSE | IOTA, LOUISIANA
ARCHITECT
SUMMER 2008

In a small town in the rice country of Louisiana, the Iota House is both rehabilitation and a modernization. The resolution lies somewhere between what is and what will be. It consists of 2 outbuildings (an outhouse and carport) that become part of the original structure with the aid of a wrap-around porch. Like most of our projects, the porch is integral to the solution. It satisfies the client's goals, serving as a slip joint between the new and the old, and in the end, harmonizes the scheme both internally and externally.
